Communicate with Your Children

This is a vulnerable time for our children. They are especially vulnerable during times of transition. Examples include, moving in or out of a community or school, and graduation. One need only to look at headlines splashed across the front pages of every major city to know this is an extremely sensitive time.

In light of these recent disturbing trends, parents and professionals have decided it may be time to start listening to our kids. Let's ask our children what they know or have learned about alcohol and drugs. Ask them what they think about the benefits and risks associated with alcohol and drug use. Ask them if they have ever been offered or tried cigarettes, alcohol, or drugs.

Ask them to teach you about the choices they are faced with and how they go about making their decisions. Ask them to include us, the parents in that process. Be prepared to stay calm even if you hear things that shock you. Be prepared to discuss your viewpoints and values around alcohol and drug use. Be prepared for your child to ask you questions. Be prepared to compare your adolescence with theirs and to offer support. Realize that based on your experiences you may have no idea what it is like to be a teenager or pre-teen in 2000.

Most importantly, be prepared for a deeply meaningful and critical conversation that will serve as a model for future conversations and will surely enhance and strengthen your relationship with your child. Just a reminder, Patch High School graduation is June 10. For info about Adolescent Substance Abuse or Parenting for Prevention contact Cheryl Owen, 08062-805-509, Jasmin Coty, 430-8657/civ 0711-680-8657 or Jay Khalifeh, 431-2530/civ 07031-15-530.
